2. All courses are displayed in a list (see fig. 2). You can search for a course by entering the title or course number in the search bar, for example. Alternatively, you can use the dropdown menus "Curriculum" and "Organisation" to limit your search accordingly. You also have the option of filtering for courses using tags by clicking on

"Filter".

Notice: Tags are keywords used by the subjects to structure their courses.

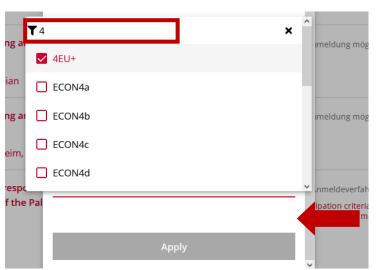

3. You will now see the filters with which you can search for courses (see fig. 3). Click on "Tags" to display a list of tags.

7. Here you can see detailed information about the course, such as course content, dates and groups (see fig. 7).

You can also see what type of course it is and how many hours per week (SWS) the course has.

If you click on the name of the lecturer highlighted in red, you will be taken to the person's profile, which includes their title.
